

Downtown Gets the Spirit of Communication in Two Ways – New Store and Statue

A few changes have occurred since AT&T settles into their new corporate headquarters at 208 S. Akard. An AT&T Wireless store has opened on the ground floor level of the remodeled and renamed Whitacre Tower. AT&T also brought an old friend along for the relocation that is fondly referred to as “Golden Boy.” The 28-foot gilded bronze statue titled “The Spirit of Communication” has been in hiding since 2002, but once stood atop the AT&T building on Broadway in Manhattan. It is gilded in thousands of layers of shiny gold leaf and features a man holding crossed lightning bolts in a raised fist. It is much worth the trip to visit the new store and statue on your next lunch break at work or weekend strolling around Downtown!
